Buying From a Dealer

Scouring websites or magazines where private parties sell their used vehicles may seem attractive due to the low price points.

You may save a few dollars, but you don’t know what you are truly getting unless you buy from an officially licensed dealer.

Knowing and trusting a private party when you are planning to purchase a used vehicle is one thing, but buying from an unknown seller can prove disastrous. It is easy to acquire the history of a vehicle using the vehicle identification number (VIN), but this will only show you major events in the life of the automobile, not nuances that may become major problems later.

The only way to get a good grasp on the condition of a used vehicle is to spend quality time behind the wheel. Sometimes these issues arise once it is too late to back out of the deal. It is in your best interest to head to your local dealership when considering a used vehicle purchase.

Less Paperwork and Financial Backing

Purchasing a vehicle from a dealership gives you freedom from the sometimes-confusing paperwork that goes into transferring a title or registering a new vehicle. A major benefit you gain from buying from a dealer is this paperwork is prepared for you.

You also will have the advantage of acquiring a loan on location at the dealership. Dealers have extensive networks of financial institutions and might be able to offer better interest rates than you might find when applying for a loan on your own.

Buy Certified Pre-Owned

When you buy a used vehicle from a private party, you are taking the risk of buying something unreliable or even unsafe. Many dealerships offer certified pre-owned vehicles. These models are put through extensive inspections and repairs and often carry impressive warranties.

These thorough inspections are crucial to those who live in areas that require emissions and other types of testing on vehicles.

Convenience

Arranging a meeting with a private party to look at the vehicle you are considering can be difficult.

Buying from a dealership allows you to visit the lot on your own schedule and gives you the ability to look at numerous models at the same time. You also will feel more comfortable performing the test drive with a salesper-
The Test Drive

The test drive is an important part of any vehicle purchase. It is your opportunity to see how well the vehicle drives and how it will meet your needs. A test drive also makes it easy to avoid purchasing a vehicle with safety or mechanical issues.

Before heading to the lot, have several vehicle models in mind. If you happen to fall in love with the first model you test drive, it is still important to stick with your intentions to try other options. The comparisons you make from driving several vehicles will ultimately land you in the perfect one.

Plan a Route
Before going in for your test drive, travel around the perimeter to find roads in different conditions. You will want to travel down roads that will test the important components of the vehicle.

Here are some great conditions to look for when planning a route:
- Bumpy roads: A less-than-smooth road is a great way to test a vehicle's suspension system. Use these roads to listen for noises coming from the shocks or struts and make sure the ride is still comfortable.
- Sharp turns: Find roads that offer sharp turns. You will get a good grasp on what kind of condition a steering system is in. Pay attention to any noises or pulling when turning.
- Interstates: Be sure to get the vehicle to interstate speeds. This speed allows you to notice acceleration performance, alignment and shifting conditions of the transmission. Issues with any of these might mean big problems in the future.
- Stop and go: Traveling down roads with many stop lights or signs will show you how well the brake system is performing. If you notice vibrations or noises, the brake issues should be addressed before purchase.

From Inside the Cab
There also are things you should look for inside a vehicle during a test drive.

When you have the vehicle up to the high speeds on the interstate, pay attention to any vibration from the steering wheel. There could be an indication of serious issues with the vehicle’s suspension or alignment system.

Watch the dashboard for any kind of warning lights. These lights indicate a problem. It might not be significant, but ask your salesperson to have the dealership’s service team diagnose the issue.
Lease buyouts smart for some Leasing enables many people to drive brand new vehicles, and they can take advantage of the benefits such cars and trucks offer, such as low maintenance.

Leasing has been compared to renting a car for a specific period of time. A person is allowed to use the vehicle, but must return it after a few years in very good condition. Lease payments may be considerably lower than financing rates, and some people may be able to lease a particular make or model that would be out of reach otherwise.

According to the latest Lease Market Report from Edmunds.com, more new vehicles were leased during the first half of 2016 than during any other such period in history. Lease volume has doubled in the last five years, with millennials and seniors leasing more vehicles than any other demographics.

At the end of a lease, people have the option of turning it in and starting a new lease or buying out the lease. Lease buyouts might be the right fit for some drivers.

Types of buyouts
The Department of Motor Vehicles says there are two buyout options. These include a lease-end buyout and an early buyout.

With a lease-end buyout, the lessee pays the residual value of the vehicle at the end of the lease contract. It is the most common of the options.

Drivers can look at their lease agreements to see what the residual amount was calculated to be. Then they can use an automotive price comparison tool, like those offered by Kelley Blue Book or Edmunds, to see if the amount is comparable to the private-party selling price, or the true market value of that vehicle. If the amount is less or very near to the value listed, it could be worth it to engage in a lease-end buyout.

The other buyout option is an early lease buyout. This gives lessees the option to purchase the leased car or truck before the end of the contract. Calculating if the value of the vehicle makes such a buyout financially feasible can be more challenging because one still has to factor in depreciation, the amount of money still owed on the lease and what the current market value of the vehicle would be.

Reasons for buyouts
There are many reasons to choose a lease-end or early buyout. If the vehicle is in poor shape or if drivers have exceeded the mileage limits on the lease, thereby incurring penalties, it may be smarter to buy out the lease.

Others may have maintained their leased vehicles and liked the cars so much so that they want to keep on driving them.

Buying out a lease can sometimes make the most financial sense for drivers.

Shopping for a new car is at once exciting and overwhelming. Make the process smoother by knowing what to expect before you hit the lots.

If you go into the process informed, you can bypass a lot of undue stress and purchase a vehicle you are pleased with at a price you can afford.

Here are five steps to take before purchasing a new car:

1. Know what you like and dislike about your current vehicle. This will help you make a “wish list” for your next vehicle. Also, start taking mental notes when you are passenger in the vehicles of friends and family.

2. Consider the future. While it is difficult to know what the future holds in the present time, you cannot ignore what is likely to happen. If you see yourself starting a family in the coming few years, it would not do you good to purchase a sports car now with only two seats.

   Make sure you’re in a position to trade in these types of vehicles for more family-friendly options when the time comes.

3. Conduct market research. If you’ve narrowed down your car search to a body style (passenger car, SUV, minivan, truck or crossover) be sure to research these models by several different automakers.

   While some vehicles are truly a “step ahead” of their competition, for others, you may find you will pay more just for the luxury of owning a specific brand. It’s also good to check out maintenance prices for each vehicle in your area, as this can be drastically different from each make and model.

   Be honest with your salesperson. It can be instinctive to project ourselves in certain ways — by insinuating that we can pay more than we can, for example. Remember, the salesperson is there to sell cars. They want to sell you a car, but if you give them incorrect information, it can leave you both feeling frustrated.
Prevent impaired/distracted driving

Some of the most festive times of the year are associated with an increased risk of automotive accidents due to impaired driving. Any time alcohol, drugs, exhaustion, distractions, and driving are mixed, the results can be unsafe driving conditions that increase the risk of injury or death.

Impaired driving

Twenty-eight people die each day in the United States in vehicular accidents that involve an alcohol-impaired driver, accounting for one death every 51 minutes, offers the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Statistics Canada points out that impaired driving remains one of the most frequent criminal offenses in Canada and is among the leading criminal causes of death. While alcohol-impaired driving has decreased over the past several decades, drug-impaired driving is on the rise.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration says alcohol and certain drugs reduce functions of the brain and impair thinking, reasoning and muscle coordination. These are all skills that are essential to the safe operation of motor vehicles. Some of the typical effects of impairment increase proportionally to the level of blood alcohol concentration. Furthermore, interactions between alcohol and other substances in the body can increase the level of risk when driving.

Impairment laws vary by area. Blood alcohol concentration laws typically consider a blood alcohol content, or BAC, of .08 percent or above as criminal. The NHTSA says that a BAC of .08 or higher contributes to poor muscle coordination, leading to slower reaction control, decreased balance and impaired vision and hearing. Memory may be diminished and self-control and reasoning are compromised at this point as well.

Distracted driving

It is important to note that driving under the influence of illegal substances, alcohol and even prescription medications can lead to crashes. But a recent and increasingly pervasive driving problem is distracted driving. The Federal Communications Commission says the use of mobile devices behind the wheel can cause unintended and deadly consequences. The NHTSA says that at any moment during the day, approximately 660,000 drivers use cell phones or manipulate electronic devices while driving — a figure that has remained stable since 2010.

Preventing vehicular accidents, injuries and fatalities comes down to using common sense.

• No one should text and drive. Store phones out of reach or set “away” messages and quiet alerts while behind the wheel. If a phone must be used, pull over to a safe area to do so.
• Know the side effects of medications you are taking and how they can impair driving. If taking a newly prescribed medication, do not operate a vehicle until you understand how it makes you feel.
• Pull over if you are feeling drowsy behind the wheel. Opening the window or listening to loud music may not be enough to keep you awake.
• Never mix alcohol or drugs with driving. Opt for a rideshare service or taxi if you will be having a few drinks at a bar or restaurant. Even one or two drinks can impair drivers.

Impaired and distracted driving is no joke. It is a problem throughout the year, but one that is largely preventable.
Trends in Automobiles

More people than ever bought cars in 2016, according to AutoData — a whopping 17.55 million cars to be exact. If you did not purchase one of these vehicles, chances are you will be in the market for a new ride soon.

The average age of a vehicle on the roads in the United States is approximately 12 years. Your new car will probably be very different from your current one. Below are four trends you should have on your radar.

Technology Comes Standard

One of the great things about new cars is advancements in technology. Not only are these advancements crucial to state-of-the-art safety features, but they go a long way toward your personal comfort.

Cars are increasingly loaded with Internet connections and extensive “infotainment” systems that connect to both Apple and Android operating systems.

More Electric

Automakers are investing heavily in alternative fuel options — producing an all-time high number of all-electric and hybrid vehicles. While sales of these models did decline in 2016, rising gas prices and environmental concerns are just a few reasons these vehicles are sure to see a comeback.

Re-imagining the Old

Many automakers also bringing new innovations to some of their older models. This includes Ford, which plans to bring a new spin on its cult-favorite Bronco come 2020. In addition, Volkswagen earlier this year revealed a modern concept of its micro-bus, which became popular in the 1970s that will be self-driving and electric that has been dubbed the VW Buzz.

Millennial Mindset

There has been a noticeable growth in vehicles that seem to cater to millennial sensibilities. One of these is transportation services. Automakers are noticing that many of the up-and-coming generation do not want to own vehicles and are instead investing in their own ride-sharing programs.

Another concept in the works by Fiat Chrysler is a concept minivan that would allow its passengers to plug in multiple devices for content sharing. No word when, or if, this will hit the market, but automakers definitely are thinking creatively about wooing millennials.
